Kieckhefer's Forbidden Rites presents a typological analysis of the means and ends of late Medieval nigromantia, 'necromancy', which is to say magic facilitated by the agency of spirits. Taking as his primary object of analysis the instructions for magical operations collected in manuscript Clm 849 of the Bavarian State Library, Kieckhefer divides the contents according to immediate function: illusory apparitions, psychological manipulation, or divination.

Description. The naga use dark, forbidden rituals to subjugate the elements to their will. But such rituals threaten to destroy the elemental balance that binds this world together. The rituals must be stopped. Fortunately, the rituals the naga use are too elaborate to commit to memory. The ritual instructions are contained within ancient texts. If we destroy the ancient tomes that contain the rituals, the knowledge will be lost to the naga forever.
