On Diwali, each house is lit up with oil lamps, candles and colourful electric lights. Traditionally, the earthen lamps with cotton wicks were lit in most of the houses. However, with the changing modern times, earthen lamps have been replaced by candles in many of the houses. Yet, the concept of the festival of lights remains unchanged.

Make holes in the side of the clay bowl. These allow the light to shine through. Decide where you will place the holes evenly around the bowl, marking each spot with a small nick in the clay to check for evenness all the way around the bowl. Then press the holes out with the end of a paintbrush or pencil.

The reason for this is that the lighting of a diya lamp in honor of Diwali is regarded as forcing light upon darkness, whether it be in the form of evil, tyranny or ignorance. Further, since light represents all things good, a light shining from a diya in every corner is meant to bring hope and prosperity for all mankind.

Diwali - Wikipedia

Diwali, which is also known as Deepavali, is the annual festival of lights celebrated by many people of Indian and South Asian descent throughout the world every October or November. The holiday name ??????? comes from the combination of two Sanskrit words : "deepa," which is a lamp or diya, and "vali," a row, hence a row of lights.
